

Rotman 2002

Joseph L. Rotman School of Management
University of Toronto

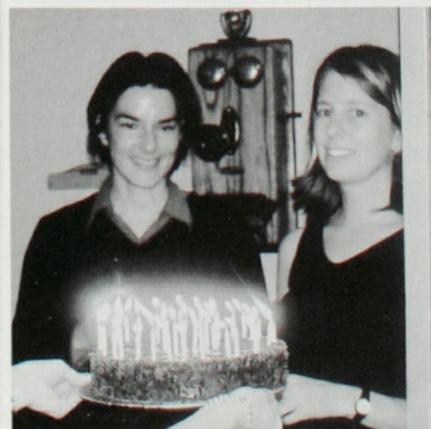

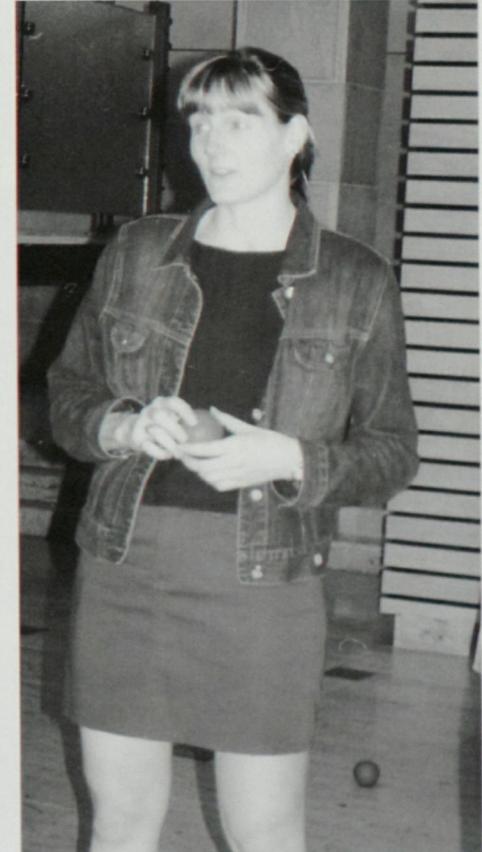

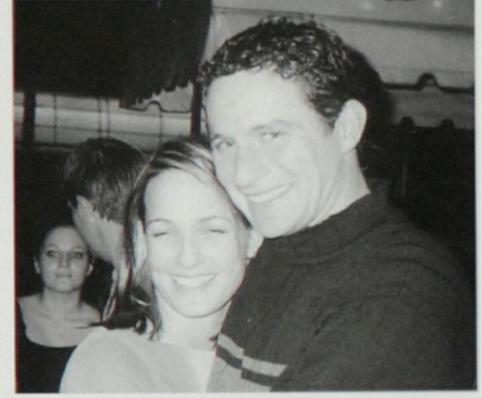

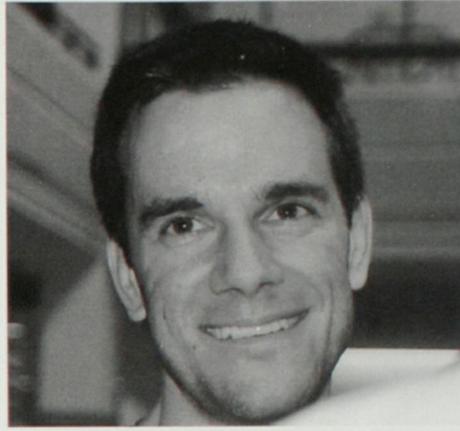

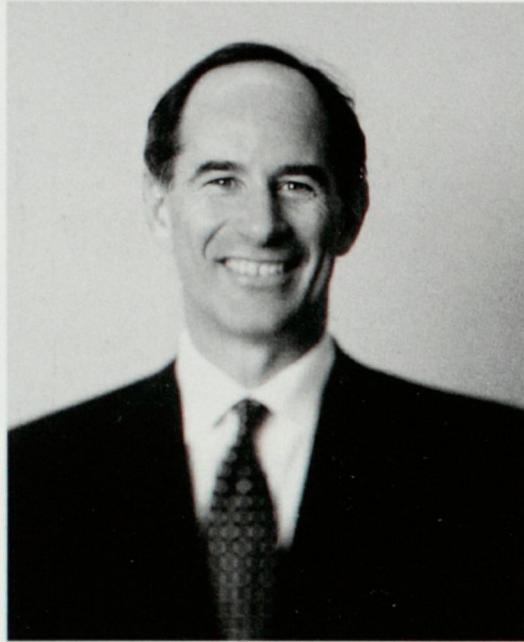

Congratulations to all Rotman MBA students on the completion of another successful academic year. Your energy, enthusiasm and hard work have made the Rotman name stand out on the U of T campus, across Canada, and throughout the business community.

Some of the student initiatives that made this year so memorable include January's MBA Business Conference, "The Quest for Capital," which saw business leaders debate the strengths and weaknesses of the Canadian capital markets system; the Rotman Women in Management Association's stellar efforts to encourage more women to enroll in the MBA program, including an open-house in November and a seminar featuring Heather Reisman in March; and the Inter-University Trading Competition hosted here in March, which saw Rotman's team take first prize against teams from Carnegie-Mellon and MIT.

Significant progress was made this year in our attempts to place the Rotman School among the top ten business schools worldwide. In January, we were ranked 31st in the world by the Financial Times, up an impressive 15 spots from last year. Our percentile ranking has jumped 41 points since the survey's inception in 1999. Combined with our 15-point jump in the 2002 survey, we have the best sustained trajectory among all business schools ranked — a fact we proudly announced to the world in advertisements in The Globe and Mail and The Wall Street Journal.

Those of you who are graduating are joining a worldwide network of more than 16,000 U of T business alumni in more than 70 countries worldwide. I encourage you to take advantage of the ongoing benefits available to Rotman alumni, and to keep in touch with your peers and with us. Thanks to the introduction of the Rotman Alumni Portal in April, this has never been easier. Be sure to bookmark the Portal (<http://portal.rotman.utoronto.ca>) and visit it often for the latest Rotman news.

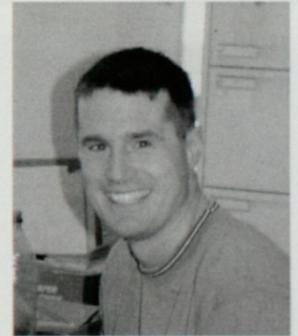

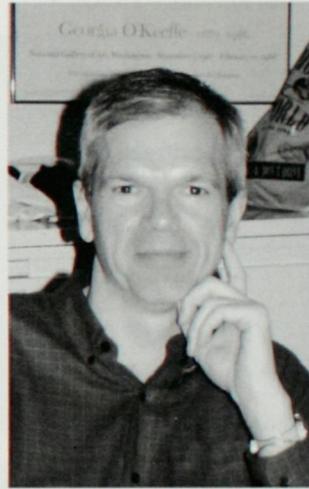

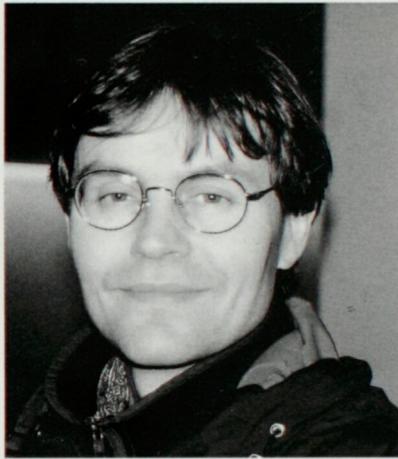

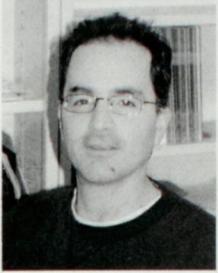

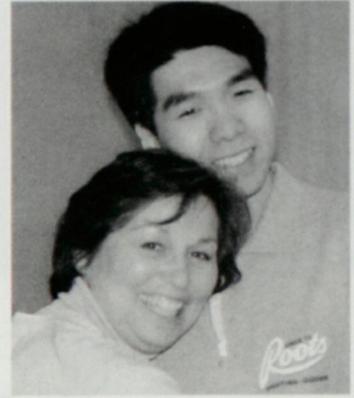

This is a great time to graduate — despite the fact that it's been a frustrating year for students in the job market. But I urge you to take the long-term view: In 1999, for the first time in recent history, the supply of talented, educated people such as yourselves began to decline, and this decreasing supply of human capital is expected to continue for the foreseeable future. I leave you with this challenge: take the skills and tools you've gained here, and in a market where you'll be more valuable and influential than ever before, don't accept any easy tradeoffs. Find a way to change the world, in your own way.

For those returning for another year of study, I look forward to watching you add to the excitement at the School and contribute to its growth.

On behalf of all Rotman faculty and staff, my very best wishes for the future.

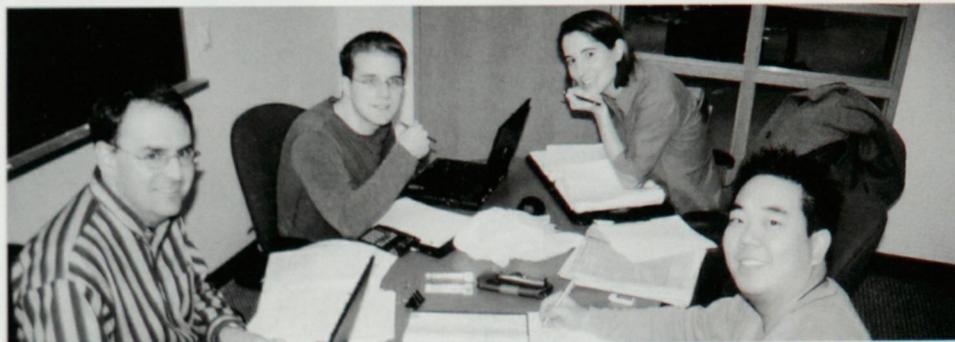

Dean Roger Martin
